What is Academic Honesty?
...giving credit where credit is due.

- being principled in your use of information
  - (know right and wrong)

- acting with integrity and respect for the work and ideas of others

- Carson Graham Academic Honesty Policy in the “About Our School” section of the website
Scientists cite sources in APA style
How can I honestly use the words and ideas of others?

Quotation

- Words written or spoken by someone else
- Not my words
- Reproduce them exactly like the source with “quotation marks around the words”
- Cite in text (Author, 2016)

Give credit to all your sources
How can I honestly use the words and ideas of others?

- Paraphrase
  - your own words and your own sentence structure
  - Cited in text (Author, 2016)

- Summary
  - your own shortened version of someone else’s words
  - Cited in text (Author, 2016)

- Give credit to all your sources
How do I give credit?

- Citations - also known as references
- Cite sources in 2 places.

1. On list of sources
   (called References in APA format)

2. In text – which means right after the information
   (Author, 2016)
In Text Citations

- Whenever you use information from a source, cite that information in text.
  (Author, 2016)

- See the Carson Library website for more information
When citing a quote, include the following:

1. author’s name
2. year of publication
3. page number

i.e. – We learned that “metamorphosis means changing shape” (Stidworthy, 1993, p. 35).

See the Carson Library website for more information.
When citing information you explain in your own words...

- Stidworthy (1993) wrote of a change of form in species.
- This form is called metamorphosis (Stidworthy, 1993).
